

Is New British Union inevitable? NBU is the response to great needs. This is an age of full warehouses, corn and wine are in abundance. There is a great need that the people also shall be filled.

This is an age for bronzed health. good homes, good jobs, good food, good holidays, these bring good health. There is a great need for health.

This is an age when peoples demand justice. The children of the poor must have no less chance than the rich. There is a great need for justice.

This is an age which commands peace. Peoples desire to live in friendship, but th Lucre Lords poison that friendship. There is a great need for peace.

This is an age which cries for sacrifice and devotion. Nations are not content to live like cows, eating and drinking. They desire the service of their country. They will devote their lives to make it fair. There is a great need for devotion.

This is an age for a great leader. Problems are heavy and menacing. Britain drifts helpless into their maw. There is a great need for a leader.

This is an age swift and vigorous, an age for action. Food banks poverty and starvation demand energy and courage. There is a great need for courage.

NBU is not a fad, nor a temporary madness, nor a Freudian complex. NBU answers to none of these frightened insults which doomed politicians fling at it for their skin-saving. NBU is the response to great needs.

It is the logic of history that needs shall be met. NBU alone can meet those needs.
