EDITORS NOTE

Fascism is often labled by its opponents as a 'right wing reaction', or 'the last resort of capitalism', and is often identified with repressive military regimes. None of this is Fascism, and fortunately in recent years a growing number of even liberal academics are seeking an accurate definition by which Fascism can be objectively studied.

Hence, Roger Griffin of Oxford for example has written that whilest Fascism seeks national rebirth this does not imply a conservative 'turning back the clock'. Socialist AJ Gregor points out that Fascism is niether 'pro capitalist nor anti-labour'. Israeli academic Zeev Sternheel has identified 'Fascist Socialism as remaining revolutionary, while rejecting Marxism.

The fact is Fascism is a union of both national and social principles, because a true nation is itself a social unit, an extended family.

IMMIGRATION AND CULTURAL DIVERSITY

The collective experience of our European ancestry, history, and culture in Canada and in the U.K., grounds us in our land and primal attachment to that land. This is what made us great, productive and generally able to get along with each other. This history and cultural heritage energizes us as a single folk.

When the communist governments that we currently have, bring in millions of foreigners that were never part of our homeland or culture or heritage, we tend to have that cohesiveness disrupted.

Studies have shown that countries that do not have a homogeneous population suffer from social disruption as we have seen in Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Germany, France, the Netherlands, the U.K. and Canada, among others.

Societies that are fractionalized by foreign immigration and particularly by foreigners who do not intend to integrate and change their habits to conform to the norms of that society, are a particular risk for societal dislocation and confrontation.

Asylum seekers are perhaps the worse possible immigrants as they require a vast array of services that are government based, and that reduces the availability of those services to the original occupants of the land. It also strains housing, job availability, rents, food security, etc., and taxpayer original inhabitants are further taxed to accommodate these people.

Millions of browns, blacks and muslims, threaten our societies, and having seen the riots in Sweden and other countries where these groups feel that they have a right to protest against the norms of our countries, or in fact, become gangs of rapists, murderers and child molesters, we must strive to remove the communist politicians that want more of these people to arrive every year.

Cultural diversity is not a way to have stability it is a flawed concept that only the communists (i.e., Liberals, Labour, Conservatives and all failed politicians) have foisted on our populations. It must be fought in every way possible.

We now have the the World Economic Forum telling us that our societies are to be removed so that the world can be ruled by the elites like Klaus Schwab, the son of a Nazi war profiteer, and the other young country leaders that have joined him to destroy our cultures (Trudeau, Sunak, Rutte, et. al.).

Foreign immigration is the tool that the elites, the WEF, the UN, and the WHO, who want to overlord us, are using to fractionalize our populations and introduce a world where we eat only the dregs of a destroyed agricultural hierarchy and they eat the best of the best, grown on farms dedicated only to the elites.

As a fascist, this scenario is abhorrent. I would rather the earth comes to an whimpering end than we suffer under the boot of the WEF and its Nazi origins.

The Meaninglessness of Modern Life

By: Pastor Andrew Isker

Modern life is meaningless. Our young people believe they have no other purpose on this earth other than to seek pleasure and entertain away their boredom. Tens of millions in our country live this way. Is it any wonder that we have never been more anxious, depressed, and suicidal?

Like many in the Millennial Generation, I went to college and enjoyed four years of few responsibilities and seemingly endless opportunities for fun with friends. Your first taste of life as an adult is pleasure island. You are young with unlimited free time and can do whatever you want. Even if you are a Christian and you avoid the bacchanal of drunkenness, drugs, and fornication, you still become accustomed to a slightly more wholesome dissipate lifestyle. You assume this is what adult life is. For many in my generation, you leave college and continue to chase that same high. You find a job—if you are lucky—and have less free time. You are separated from most of your college friends. But you become desperate to relive those glory days, even if only Friday night through Sunday.

For many, if not most in my generation, that is the “good life” you are programmed to pursue. You exist merely to maximize your own pleasure. You exist to work enough to be entertained.

To produce enough so that you might consume. But as sand slowly drains from the hourglass and your youth slowly escapes you, at some point you begin to feel an existential dread. Deep down, in your bones, you know you were not made for this. This is not enough. There is something missing. Even recapturing the highs of college and taking a trip to Vegas with the boys doesn’t hit the same. The high wears off and the hangover sets in and never goes away.

Such is the experience of so many in my generation. It will be the experience of the generation to follow, as well. The days of our youth, when all our ancestors formed families and built with a mind to the future, are wasted by us. Looking at fertility statistics, nearly half of American women under 45 are childless.

This portends a time to come when a majority of people are totally alone, with no stake whatsoever in the future. A people who will die alone and who will have devoted their life to nothing but conspicuous consumption.

This is how civilizations die. Sometimes they are overthrown in cataclysmic warfare and conquest. More often, they lose the will to live and die of demographic suicide. You cannot really blame this generation any more than you can blame the Boomers for the conditions they were born into and shaped by. And look at what this generation was formed by. They were born just after the median standard of living peaked in America. Everyone assumed the good times would continue on indefinitely and the next generation would simply inherit it. We came of age where everyone was living as if the good times were still here, but the fact that they were gone and never coming back was something that escaped everyone.

At the same time, all the things that give life meaning were taken from us and in many cases vilified. We grew up being taught that pride in your heritage as an American is the very grave sin of “ethnocentrism” and very near kin of the unforgivable sin of racism. Implicit in this idea is that it is good for America to simply die off and be replaced by random human beings from across the globe. Whether you were on the far left or a conservative evangelical, you were brought up believing the world is soon going to end, either from Global Warming or the Rapture, respectively. Why would you want to bring children into a doomed world to suffer?

A very brief blip of reinvigorated patriotism after 9/11 was quickly spent on trillion-dollar, decades-long, aimless occupations of third-world countries in the Middle East. The very same people singing along to Toby Keith’s “Courtesy of the Red, White, and Blue” would, less than two decades later, be calling America “the most racist country in the world.” Why would you want to create new Americans if that were the case? Any vital spirit, any pride in people or place was systematically removed. The energy that previous generations would devote to producing subsequent generations has been spent on satisfying our fleeting desires.

It may seem like our civilization is doomed. It might seem like we are never coming back. In many ways this is true. The old America is gone. It has no will to survive. This does not mean, however, that Americans will disappear. What instead is taking place is a great bifurcation. Those who still retain the will and energy and desire to see their nation be preserved, to have it continue on to the next generation are consciously separating themselves from the old world.

These are young people who love their country, love their people, love their place, and love their heritage. These are young people who have seen the worthlessness of living for nothing except to consume and be entertained. Young people who realize what I call “Trashworld” must be totally despised. Young people who recognize that their lives are about so much more than going to nice bars and restaurants with friends week after week. Young people who have rejected the path of least resistance offered to them and instead chosen the way of life our ancestors pursued. A life of dedication and duty. A life of honor. A life that produces life. They have instead sought out a life that rejects our world’s banishment of the transcendent and looked to the heavens to pursue the glory of God. No longer is the meaningless of modern life acceptable to them. They seek out what the Lord has created them to be.

There yet remains a vanguard of those who carry forth the torch of civilization. The events of the past few years have caused many of them to reorganize and reorient their lives around building communities that will survive what is to come. Just as ancient Christians lived in a polis—city—inside the polis, so too must we today. And not just communities of Christians generally, including those enamored with Trashworld, but those who see the time of day. God has orchestrated events such that we are forced into doing so. No longer can we remain comfortable and complacent like those who love the world of filth.

No, instead we must become like the Pilgrims who first settled in America. But unlike them, there is no wilderness of the New World to settle. We must re-found our nation even as the decaying one has not yet fully surrendered to ruin. This mission is the antidote to modern ennui. The mission of Christians is to rebuild what we have lost and carry forward the inheritance we have been given—a mission to build a Parallel Christian Society. Far from despairing at the death of the nation we love, we can devote ourselves to rebuilding it anew. And while the lovers of Trashworld breathe their last gasps alone and terrified with nothing but faded memories of brunch, we will go to glory surrounded by our children's children who will take up the mantle of building a new Christendom after we have gone. That is a vision of the good life. That is the vision of a life well spent. And that is what we must pursue.

There are legitimate white supremacists who use slogans like 'white pride' and 'it's okay to be white'.

What, if anything, do you have to say about them?

And there's legitimate Asian Muslim domestic terrorists bombing our nations, and BLM movement followers rioting, looting and causing anarchy and destruction.. and the amount of violent racially motivated hate crime against white people has increased to 5x the amount of any other race..

So do you really want to make a problem here about a fucking slogan ?? How does it effect you?

It's actually not illegal to be proud of your race and freedom of expression is a human right available to all who share our nations. However when your freedom of expression impacts negatively on others, that is illegal and a breach of the human rights act..

Perhaps take some responsibility for keeping your own side of the street clean instead of throwing your shit at everyone else.. Those in glass houses and all that!!

much as I don't condone ignorance and racism in white people, I don't also condone the constant one-sided attack against white people who are not the ones acting in an unacceptable and inhumane way against the rest of society that we have ensured are multicultural and given everyone in them the exact same equal rights by law as white people have.

We are constantly aware of the BAME and BLM causes, and the need for us to show diversity, inclusion and having to be constantly mindful not to offend the minorities in everything that we say and do.. its rammed down our throats on a daily basis..

But unfortunately we are not shown the same respect and courtesy, and just smeared and accused of racism, especially if we show any respect of pride in our own race which is supposed to be equal to yours..or raise the unacceptable conduct of the minorities against society..

So when a black person celebrates black history month, black music awards, and anything black freely with pride, and the Asians celebrate Diwali and Eid and their own culture freely and with pride. So why then, when a white person says merely "Its OK to be white" do you see that as wrong and assume its a slogan for white supremacy and insulting and offensive to you?? Is that not hypocritical and double standards?

Do you believe that your race is superior, or should be superior to whites?

Equality means equality so if you don't want to see a slogan stating 'white pride' or 'it's OK to be white' then you must be prepared to dismantle the BAME and BLM movements, lose black history month and all the other events that are just for one race!!

The irony being that this fair point will be seen as racism and reported.. pure ignorance!

Today's left can at a glance can best be viewed as sexual/moral deviants often characterised by odious malcontents often with blue or green hair, a uniform if you will & an effort to distinguish themselves from ordinary, industrious members of society who generally work for a living.

Despite the "solidarity" these types offer to working folk, it is rare to find any of these characters involved in any sort of work themselves, either spoilt brats living off wealthy parents or hard core spongers and scroungers. That these types are often either/or certified lunatics and/or are habitual drunk users comes with the territory.

Despite their shortcomings another common theme is the inherent and often uncontrollable rage which propels them and whilst the "cause" may be stopping oil, asylum seekers, climate changer, whatever I contend that the anger is driven by their inability tho actually kill and murder anyone disagreeing with their agenda.

After all their heroes in the USSR, China and Vietnam were able to dispatch tens of millions of supposed class enemies and in more recent times red terror gangs both in these islands and across Europe were in the business of more clinical eradication of their opponents whereas the lady or gentleman with a drugs habit, multicoloured hair and often suffering from a variety of STIs knows that society and the working classes would reject both them & their philosophy out of hand.

The fact that they live in an albeit imperfect society governed by laws and traditions enrages them in an impotent rage.

Whilst these types may well be regarded as figures of fun and contempt, beyond that lies a more serious effort to emulate the aforementioned murderous gangs of terrorists, here I'm referring to AFA, a multicultural & multinational collective of thugs, gangsters and would be killers who generally aren't standing beside trannies and AIDS ridden deviants but are quietly planning their own agenda.

Recent events in Northern Ireland, France & Germany involving AFA make clear their goal, with hammers, bats and knives utilised against those they (wrongly) consider Fascist. Fascism is in effect anyone opposing the mutual agenda of the aforementioned.

Conservatism, courts and cops are incidental to the would be killers, for even if apprehended & put before a court they know with mathematical certainly that they'll be treated with kid gloves by judges themselves the product of liberal achedemia & thus no actual deterrent exists.

As such Fascism must be seen as "the thin black line", a divide between chaos & order, forget for a minute policy on politics, economics & social doctrine for as things get worse financially & in political terms leftist elements will emerge from the sewers which spawns the red ideology and the vermin which champions it.

To be met with the black boot of Fascism!

RICHARD Levy (aka 'Richard Leviathan') is best known for his musical prowess with bands such as Strength Through Joy and Ostara, not to mention the many other contributions that he has made to the neofolk and neoclassical scenes. Richard is also an underground writer and poet, with his first volume of 'Odes' having been published by Black Front Press in 2015. This new collection examines the life and thought of the great philosophers, both ancient and modern, drawing upon the existential and apocalyptic themes that lie at the heart of Richard's worldview. From Epicurus and Evola to Siddhartha and Schopenhauer, these wonderfully unique verses will not only provide the reader with an education but act as an incentive towards further investigation.

NEW APPOINTMENT

heritage. I have many interests including language, history, art, philosophy, music, and of course politics. I enjoy fishing, shooting, and gardening and I work in the trades. I'm training to be a professional bathroom fitter and hope to make it my main source of income. I have a passion for nationalism and have a strong desire to awaken my fellow man and enlighten the public. I am active and fit and try to set an example to others as I am a man of principles and strong work ethic. For most of my life I've felt as though I could never express my political leanings or opinions for risk of losing opportunities or jobs or respect, but now I wear my heart on my sleeve and I aim to do away with the stigma surrounding fascism. During high-school and college I named my friend group the 'hursty blackshirts' because I wanted to start a Fascist group with them even if a few were not of the same political leanings. I have lived in the most 'diverse' areas and seen the impact its had on my family, friends, and the general public and I'm empowered by these experiences to move forward and take action against it at all cost.

CLOWN WORLD

The Government has stated that migrants will soon be subject to age checks after a 41-year-old man disguised as a kid to claim asylum in the UK.

Immigration Minister Robert Jenrick has informed MPs that when migrants arrive in the country, officials will conduct medical examinations.

According to reports, X-rays and MRI scans are among the technologies being investigated to debunk fake age claims, which would provide them preferential treatment in the eyes of the law.

Mr Jenrick said in the House of Commons that the additional measures would be implemented “over the course of this year” and denounced those who “abuse the system.”

He also addressed the recent case of a man who was nearly 30 years older than he claimed.

According to the minister, immigration officials recently discovered that a man who claimed to be a youngster was, in reality, 41 years old.

He described the man as the “oldest individual we’ve encountered” acting as a child after entering in the nation.

Lone children who arrive in the UK to seek refuge are given immediate help, support, and protection from authorities and are transported to specialised centres.

Adults seeking asylum, on the other hand, are frequently processed for months while waiting for their asylum applications to be approved.

Approximately 867 out of 1,386 children taken in by local authorities were wrongly classified, meaning they could have been placed alone with adults in unsupervised accommodation, raising new safeguarding concerns.

NEW BRITISH UNION NEEDS YOUR SUPPORT

In recent months we have been inundated with new people, old and young, reaching out to us. Some just have a few questions they need answering but the majority reach out because they want to get involved in our fight.

Online activism serves a purpose but we need to start building local communities as well as a large national community.

To do this requires money and although we’re not in the habit of asking supporters for money we’re in a position where we have to in order to grow and to organise real life events.

You can donate or purchase a product via our online store at newbritishunion.co.uk

You can also send us an email if you’d rather donate via an alternative method.

All support goes towards our growth and our continued fight for you, your loved ones and the rest of our people.
